Sponsored by the Vice President for Student Affairs

What was life like for LGBTQ+ UNI students in the 1960s? A secretive underground life was led by LGBTQ+ people when no protections or support services for LGBTQ+ students existed on campus. According to accounts of former students, UNI began to “purge” gay men from the school in the mid-1960s. One such man was Tim Sullivan, a student who was asked to leave UNI’s campus for being gay. Tim left Iowa and went on to lead a successful career in fashion, becoming the Director of Visual Merchandising for Brooks Brothers. His work has earned Store of the Year Award and been featured on magazine covers. Tim is returning for the first time to share his story as part of UNI’s history.

Interested in Tim’s life after UNI in fashion? Tim will also be speaking with students interested in creative fields over meals during his trip. Contact lgbt@uni.edu to RSVP and for the location.
